DEBUTANTE AFFAIRS

Miss Mary Ballard Will be Presented This Afternoon by Her Parents—Luncheon.

The largest affair of the afternoon will be the tea which Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Ames Ballard will give for their daughter, Miss Mary Ballard, at their home in St. Martin's, Chestnut Hill. The house is lavishly decorated—great cydonium ferns and tall palms are used with a profusion of chrysanthemums in the decorations. Innumerable bouquets and baskets and small fancy potted flowers are banked about the rooms in which Mrs. Ballard and her daughter will receive.

Miss Ballard will be assisted in receiving by Miss Marion Eyras Savage, Miss Eleanor L. Porcher, Miss Huberta Potter, Miss Marjorie Taylor, Miss Emily D. Williams, Miss Frances L. Stoughton, Miss Catherine R. Newbold, Miss Ethel C. Elkins, Miss Marion S. Kingston, Miss Elizabeth P. Dallas, Miss Rachel W. Latta, Miss Marion Cleveland, daughter of the late President Cleveland; Miss Louise Homer, daughter of the great prima donna; Miss Margaret R. Kennedy, of Chambersburg; Miss Harriet Kunhardt, of North Andover, Mass.

Miss Ballard will wear a dainty girlish frock of charmeuse veiled in chiffon and shadow lace. A dinner will follow the tea for the receiving party, and additional guests among the younger dancing men and the evening will be devoted to informal dancing.

The second debutante function today will be the luncheon which Mrs. J. Harrison Smith will give at the Bellevue-Stratford in honor of Miss Margaret Berwind, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Augustus Berwind, of Radnor. The guests will be seated at small tables and will number about 25.

WEDDINGS

Miss Baker Will Become Bride of Allen S. Dunn Tonight.

One of the most interesting of this week's weddings will take place tonight in the Tioga Presbyterian Church, Tioga and 16th streets, when Miss Elizabeth M. Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Baker, of 3728 North 16th street, will become the bride of Allen S. Dunn, son of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Dunn, of 1531 West Tioga street. Doctor Dunn, who is pastor of the church, will officiate at the ceremony. The bride's father will give her in marriage and she will wear a white gown made of exquisite hand-embroidered sheer silk imported from China. It is draped over white satin mesaline and finished with a court train. Her tulle veil is attached to a lace cap, fashioned like a diadem and held in place with orange blossoms and pearls. Her bouquet will be a shower of bride roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. Maud Drein Bryant, the bride's cousin, will be matron of honor. She will be gowned in pink crepe de chine and lace and will carry a shower of rosebuds that match the gown in color. A large black velvet hat with a pink rose on the side will add a picturesque touch to her costume.

The bridegroom will be attended by his brother, Robert Dunn, best man, and these ushers: Roy Clifton Baker, William H. Baker, brothers of the bride; Charles E. Dunn, Jr., another brother of the bridegroom; Dr. William C. Drein, cousin of the bride; James Whiting and James McGee. The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dunn on their return from an extended journey will live at 1538 Kerbaugh street, Tioga, and will receive after January 1.

GROSSMAN-HARRISON
Miss Fannie Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levy Harrison, of 2285 North Broad street, and David Grossman, of 3207 Diamond street, were married yesterday at noon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Leon H. Elmaleh, of the Mikveh Israel Congregation, Broad and York streets. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was unattended. She wore her traveling gown of dark green velvet. Immediately after the service, which was witnessed only by the families of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Grossman left for a tour through the South. They will live at 217 North 20th street and will receive after November 20.

FLASHES FROM "STARS"

There is a certain wizardry in the music of Ivan Caryll—a haunting elusiveness, a fairy dalliance, a Fragonard delicacy, a glittering sparkle akin to the play of light on water. This quality of personal genius runs through "The Pink Lady," "Chin-Chin" and "Papa's Darling." Indeed all of Caryll's music. Mr. Caryll is one of three composers writing in America who do their own orchestration—the other two, supreme geniuses, too—are Rudolph Friml, who wrote "The Firefly," and Victor Herbert. Caryll's work is exceptional because of its simplicity, the clear, untangled development of its melodies. The music of "Papa's Darling" is thoroughly delightful. With a French original of such piquant plot and whimsical wit, with a composer such as Caryll, with such stars and such a chorus, it is to be regretted that the writing of the American version of "Papa's Darling" was not given to one less uninspired, mechanical and professionally commonplace than Harry B. Smith. The book, as it has been done by Mr. Smith, has the originality, vivacity and sprightliness of newspaper boiler-plate matter. Indeed, the books of Mr. Smith are generally in the class of objects which drop forth after the insertion of a nickel in a slot. The first act of "Papa's Darling" grags despite the sheer charm of the music; the conversations are wooden and automatic; the lyrics as banal as the lucubrations of rural postmasters. Careful rehearsals, under Mr. Julian Mitchell, one of the most efficient producers in America, may vitiate Mr. Smith's inanimate dummy. The stolidity, the dullness of the book alone can militate against the ultimate success of this play, and, considering the entrancing quality of the music, this should be regretted. It is to be hoped that Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger will be fair to Mr. Caryll in giving him as a librettist for his next work some one with a gleam of animation, a modicum of inspiration.

"Sparkling Mosele" is the song hit of "Papa's Darling." A happier vehicle for its interpretation could not be found than Dorothy Jardon's voice. Like the Caryll music, her voice has a personality of its own—it is voluptuously warm, tropically rich. It carries the glow of Caribbean sunsets and Cuban florifonda trees in bloom.

There is sometimes a unique charm in incidental things, and in these, sometimes, a real sense of art manifests itself. Miss Jardon's song is accompanied by a pantomime representing a Dutch youth and maiden, the youth consumed by an awed and wondering love, and, in the second appearance, after the maid has gone "the great white way" of New York, by love's anguish and despair. The little "bit" seems to be a second thought with the producer, but it is one of the really most charming touches in the play. It is full of color, at once delightful and touching, and executed with a genuine sense of dramatic art. The expression of the love-despairing youth and his brief acting show a latent, possibly even great, ability in pantomime.

ACTRESS IS DISTRESSED BY ALLURING PARTS

Georgia Harvey, Playing in "Papa's Darling," Enjoys Unattractive, Unpossessing Roles.

Sometimes, fortunately, actresses do not look off the stage as they do before the footlights. If Georgia Harvey were as truculent, as intimidating, as terrible when she walks through the lobby of the Hotel Waldorf as she is as Mme. Le Blanc in "Papa's Darling," a stampede on the part of the amiable gentlemen of leisure who loiter in the comfortable leather chairs would be inevitable. As Yolande she is in the apotheosis of the bickering, hankering, nagging wife. For Le Blanc she makes life one long, sour nightmare.

Miss Harvey, it will be remembered, scored a tremendous hit as Madam Dondider in "The Pink Lady" and marvelously sang one of the big song hits, "Yes He Did, No He Didn't."

This success has been repeated as Yolande in "Papa's Darling." Clothed in a striped sebra dress, her hair
